AN UNINVITED GUEST.

It was nearly three o'clock on a hot summer day; the long. polished counters of our bank, the Royal Domestic Bank, was crowded with customers-money was flowing in and running out in the usual business-like manner. From ger of the Royal Domestic Bank, noway on on the busy scene with a certain pride and pleasure. The Royal Domestic is not a long established institution, and, without vanity, I may say that much of its prosperity and success is attributed to the zeal and experience of its manager. In corroboration of the statement, I might refer to the last printed report of its directors, laid before the share-holders, at their annual meeting, in which they are pleased to say—but after all, perhaps, I may be thought guilty of undue egotism and conceit, if I repeat the flattering terms in which they speak of me.

A clerk put his head inside my door.

"Mr. Thrapstow, sir, to speak to you."
"Send him in, Roberts," I said.
Charles Thrapstow I had known from boy-hood. We had both been reared in the same country town. The fact that his parents were of a considerably higher social status than mine, perhaps, made our subsequent intimacy all the pleasanter to me, and caused me to set a value upon his good opinion greater than its intrinsic worth. Thrapstow was a stockbroker, a elever, pushing fellow, who had the reputation of possessing an excellent judgment and great good luck. At my request he brought his account to our bank. It was a good account; he always kept a fair balance, and the cashier had never to look twice at his checks.

Charley, like everybody else in business, occasionally wanted money. I had let him have advances at various times, of course, amply covered by his securities, advances which were always promptly repaid, and the securities re-

At this time he had five thousand pounds of ours, to secure which we held City of Damas-cus Water Company's bonds to the nominal value of ten thousand. My directors rather demurred to these bonds, as being somewhat speculative in nature; but as I represented that the company was highly respectable, and its shares well quoted in the market, and that I had full confidence in our customer, our people sanctioned the advance. I had, perhaps a little uneasy feeling about those bonds, for they were not everybody's money, and there might have been some difficulty in finding a customer for them in case of the necessity of a sudden Thrapstow came in radiant. He was a good looking fellow, with a fair beard and moustache, bright eyes of bluish gray, a nose tilted upward, giving him a saucy, resolute air; lu most delicate shade of color in his light trousers and gloves, the glossiest of blue frock coats, a neat, light dust coat over it, a blue, bird's-eye scare ound his throat, in which was thrust a massive plue, containing a fine topaz, full of instre and allow as beaten gold.

"Wed, I've got a customer for those Damascus bonds waiting at my office; sold 'em well too—to Billings' Brothers, who want them for the Arab firm. One premium and I hought at

"I'm very glad of it, Charlie," I said, and I really felt pleased, not only for Thrapstow's sake, but because I should be glad to get rid of the bonds, and the director's shrugs whenever they were mentioned.
"Hand 'em over, old fellow," said Charlie,

"and I'll bring you Billings' check up in five minutes. You won't have closed by then; or, if you have, I'll come in at the private door." I went to the safe and put my hand upon the

Charlie stood there looking so frank and free holding out his hand for the bonds, that I had not the heart to say to him, as I ought to have done, bring your customer here, and let him settle for the bonds, and then I will hand them over. I should have said this to anybody else, but somehow I couldn't say it to Charlie. There would be only five minutes risk, and surely it was done in a moment; I was carried away by Thrapstow's irresistible manner. I handed over the bonds, and Charlie went off like a

It wanted seven minutes to three and I sat watching the hands of the clock in a little tremor, despite my full confidence in Thrapstow: but then I had so thorough a knowledge of all the rules of banking, that I couldn't help thinking that I had done wrong. A few minutes would set it right. Charlie's white hat and glittering topaz would soon put in an appear-the cashier. When he went out, I sat quite still for a few minutes, bewildered at the sudden misfortune that had happened to me. Charles Thrapstow was clearly a defaulter, but there was this one chance, he might have given the cheeks in the confidence of selling those bonds and placing the balance to his account. In due the balance to his account. In due course those checks, which were crossed, would have been brought to the clearing house, and have been presented on the morrow. But it seems that his creditors had some mistrust and had cansed the checks to be demanded out of due

The clock struck three. Charles had not come back. The bank doors closed with a clang. I could endure suspense no longer. Telling the bank porter if Mr. Thrapstow came he was to be admitted at the private door, and was to be detained in my room till I returned, I went out and made my way to his office, which was only a few hundered yards distant. He was only a few hundered yards distant. He was not there. The clerk, a youth of fifteen, knew nothing about him. He was in Chapel Court, perhaps—anywhere, he didn't know. Had be been in within the last hour? Well, no, the clerk didn't think he had. His story, With a heavy heart I went back to the bank.

then, of the customer in his office was a lie. No: Mr. Thrapstow hadn't been in, the porter I took a cab and went off to the office of Mr. Gedgemount, the solicitor of the bank. I told him in confidence what had happened, and asked his advice.

"Could I get a warrant against Thrapstow

for stealing the bonds?"

"Upon my word," said Gedgemount, "I a gentleman who insists that we don't think you can make a criminal matter of Charles—I forget the name now." it. It isn't larceny, because you abandoned Possession of the bonds voluntarily. You must make a bankrupt of him and then pursue him as having residuently carried off his assets."

"I know of no Mr. Cl But that advice was no good to me. I think pest," said Isabel.

men of law, like Gedgemount, always find a dozen reasons for inaction, except in the matters that bring grist to their own mill.

I went home completely disheartened and dejected. How could I face my directors with such a story as I had to tell them? The only excuse that I could urge of private friendship would only make the matter worse. Clearly, at the same time that I told the circumstances to the directors, I should be bound to put my resignation in their hands, to be put into force if they thought fit. And there would be little doubt that they would accept it. How damaging too, the story would be when I tried to ob-

I had promised to take my wife and children for an excursion down the river as soon as the bank closed, and the youngsters eagerly reminded me of my promise. I replied so sav-agely and sternly that the children made off in tears; my wife coming to see what was the matter, fared little better. I must have had a sun-stroke or something, she told me, and brought bandages and cau de Cologne. I flung them away in a rage and went out of the house. I must be doing something, I felt, and I hailed

I must be doing something, I fett, and I hailed a cab and drove to Thrapstow's lodgings.

Mr. Thrapstow wasn't coming home that night, his bandled in the thought he was away for a little jaint; but the didn't know. He occupied the ground-floor of a small house in Ecclesford street, Pimlico—two rooms opening into each other. I told the woman I would sit down and write a letter. She knew me well enough, as I frequently visited Thrapstow, and she left me to myself. Then I began to overhaul everything, to try to find out some clue to his whereabouts. A few letters were only circulars from tradesmen. In the fire-place was a considerable quantity of ing papers recently, and a quantity of them. I turned the tinder carefully over, spreading it upon a newspaper. I found nothing legible except one little scrap of paper, which the fire had not altogether reduced to powder, on which saw the name Isabel shining with metallic ustre. Then I went to the bed-room, and searched that. Here, too, were evident preparations for flight; coats and other garments thrown hastily into cupboards, boxes turned out, an odd glove or two lying upon the dressing table. I carefully searched all the pockets for letters or other documents, but I found nothng. The keys were left in all receptacles; an instance of Charlie's thoughtfulness for others n the midst of his rascality. Lying upon the washstand was a card, which was blank on one side, but on the other had the name of the photographer printed upon it. The card was wet, as if it had been soaked in water; and near the upper end of it was a round irregular cut, which did not quite penetrate the card. It had evidently once had a photograph fastened on it; accordingly the card had been wetted to facilitate the removal of the photograph, whilst the face of the portrait had evidently been cut out, in order to place it in a ocket or something similar. It struck me at once that the photograph about which a man on the eve of flight would take so much trouble must be a person very dear to him; probably his sweetheart. Altho' always been very reserved as to his own friends and associates, and I had no clue to guide me to any of them except the photographer's card.

Re-entering the cab I drove to the photogapher's. There was no number or distinguishing mark upon the card, and the chances eemed faint that he would be able to tell me anything about it. Indeed, at first, when the anything about it. Indeed, at first, when the little inclined to trouble himself about the matter. The premise of a fee, however, made him more reasonable and he offered to let me see his books, that I might search for the name I wanted to find. It was unlikely that the photograph had been done for Thrapstow; if it had there would probably appear on the books only the useless record of his address, already known o me. Then the man shook his head. If I idn't know the name it was no use looking; the card was nothing, he said; he sent hundreds out every month. What information could be possibly give me, then? Then I tried to describe the personal appearance of Thrapstow. But again he shook his head. If he hadn't taken his likeness he would not be likely to remember him, hardly even then, so many people passed through his hands.

All the time he had been carelessly holding the card in his fingers, glancing at it now and then, and suddenly an idea seemed to strike him. "Stop a bit," he said, and went into his dark chamber, and presently emerged smelling strongly of chemicals. "Look here," he said, triumphantly. I looked, and saw a very faint, ghostly impression of a photograph. "It's printed itself through," said the man—"they will sometimes—and I have brought it to light. Yes, I know the original of that." Again he dived into a closet, and brought out a negative with a number and a label to it. Then he turnme-Mrs. Maidmont, Larkspur Road, Notting

Away I went to Larkspur Road. Mrs. Maidmont's house was a small, comfortable residence, with bright windows, verandas, gorgeous window-boxes, and striped sun-blinds. Mrs. Maidmont was at home, said a very neat, pretty-looking maid; and I sent in my card with a message: "On most important business." The maid came back to say that her mistress did not recognize the name, but would I walk in? I was shown into a pretty drawing- eral, that day, but I couldn't help thinking how room on the first floor. An elderly lady rose to greet me with old-fashioned courtesy, at the same time with a good deal of uneasy curiosity visible in her face. This was not the original of the pdotograph, who was a young and charm-

Was she deceiving me? I did not think so. "Perhaps Miss Maidmont may know?" said eagerly.
"Miss Maidmont is not likely to have formed any acquaintance without her mother's to retreat with apologies. "I am very busy, you see," went on the old lady, with a wave of her hand, and indeed, the room, new I looked about me, I saw to be strewed with preparations for some festive event; a bail, perhaps, or from a wreath of orange blossoms that I saw peeping out of a milliner's box, more like a wedding.

I was about to take my departure reluctantly, when a charming young girl bounded into the room; she was the original of the photograph. "Oh, mamma!" she cried, "here is a letter from poor Charlie to say he can't possibly come here to-night! Isn't it provoking? want to consult him about so many things." "Well, well, my dear Isabel," said the old lady, placidly, "you'll have enough of his company after to-morrow." From which I judged that my surmise was correct as to the wedding, and that Charlie was the bridegroom-elect. "By the way," the old lady went on, "here's a gentleman who insists that we know a Mr.

I was punctual to my tryst; and at nine o'clock Susan made her appearance with a mocharred tinder. He had evidently been burn-ing papers recently, and a quantity of them. I with topaz in it, and all.

Now what was to be done? Should I go to Mrs. Maidmont and tell her how she was deceived in her daughter's lover? That would have been the way best adapted to spare the feelings of the Maidmonts; but would it bring back the five thousand pounds? I thought not.

"Miss Maidmont," I soliloquised, "will find some way to warn her lover. Even robbing a bank may not embitter a girl against her sweetheart, and no doubt she's over head and ears in love with Charlie." No; I determined on a different plan.

I didn't wait to see anything further, but posted off to the bank, and got there just as the board was assembling. I suppose some of the directors had got wind of Thrapstow's failure, for the first thing I heard when I got into the board room was old Venables grumbling out: "How about those Damasens bonds, Mr. Manager?"

I rode rough shod over old Venables, and tyrannized considerably over the board in genvery near shipwreck I had been. As for Thrapstow, I presently heard that, after all, he had arranged with his creditors, and made it up with Miss Maidmont. He had a tongue that would wind around anything, if you only gave him time, and I was not much surprised at hearing that his wedding day was fixed. He hasn't sent me an invitation, and you; now, it is of the utmost importance that I den't suppose he will, and I certainly shall not thrust myself forward a second time as an uninvited guest.

> COTTON STATISTICS .- The New York Commercial Chronicle has collected the cotton sta-tistics of the past year, from which it appears that there are in the Northern States 660 mills, with 8,927,754 spindles; in the Southern, 187 mills with 487,629 spindles. During the year the Northern mills consumed 1,094,337 bales. The Southern, 128,526 bales. The total of the country is 847 mills, 9,415,383 spindles, and cotton consumed 1,222,863 bales. The figures show a rapid progress since 1870, the number of spindles having increased about 33 per cent. The statistics of production are as follows: Threads, yarns and twines, 149,000,000 pounds; sheetings, shirtings and similar plain goods, 707,000,000 yards; twilled and fancy goods. 306,000,000 yards; print cloths, 588,000,000 yards; ducks, 30,000,000 yards; bags in number 6,000,000. Besides the above there is a large production of hosiery and knit goods, made of cotton or mixed with wool, of which there are no returns.

> COMFORTS AND LUXURIES OF THE FARM .-There is a class of farmers who are living only to grasp more acres. Their farms can never be large enough, nor can their workmen or themselves ever do quite enough work. They cannot be satisfied with the income of a farm, nor could they be with that of any other business. But those who understand that the highest object in labor is not simply to make money, but to-provide the largest amount of the means of improvement and innocent enjoyment that the world affords, can make the pursuit of agriculture furnish more luxuries that really contribute to our well-being than any other employment requiring an equal amount of capital. Their farms are not so large as to make slaves of themselves and their sons, their wives and daughters are not worn out with incessant drudgery. Their door-yards blossom with flowers, their tables are supplied with many varieties of woll-grown delicious fruit, their houses are made cheerful by the influence of books and music, and a taste for the pure and innocent enjoyments of life is developed in their children. Here and there a farmer's home exemplifies all the contentment and happiness possible to a race doomed to labor and disappointment. - Practical Farmer.

EJECTION FOR INTOXICATION.—In the Superior Court, at New York, it was decided last week that a street railway company has a perfeet right to eject intoxicated persons from their cars, and that the company is not responsible for damages in the event of the fatal injury of a person ejected under such eircumstances. this kind, but, warmly commended the conductor whose act the company defended, on the ground that the conductors should be encournged and protected in the exercise of the duty of saving passengers from being disturbed or endangered by the disorderly and improper behavior of drunken men. There can be no doubt, however, that conductors should exercise care in such cases to save the intoxicated persons ing the ejectment, else they and the company may be liable in case of personal injury.

with mortality among the whites, the basis uscolored 1,230. The estimated white population is 24,000. That of the colored is 29,000. Thus the ratio of deaths is one for every 23 whites. and one for every 21 colored. The health officer says in his report that "Previous to the war consumption among the blacks was of rare occurrence, and then only among the well marked scrofula diathesis of the African descendant." The increase of the disease is ascribed to exposure, dissipation, want of proper nutrition, clothing and bedding, and the health officer says the only hope of saving the race from the fate of the American Indians is in securing to them moral, religeous and industrial education. That this fear of their dying out in that locality is not an idle one is shown not only by the general death rate of the race, but particularly by the death rate among children under five years of age. The proportion of colored still born to whites last year as 6 to 1; the proportion of deaths under five years was 2 to 1, and this in a containing to your own feelings, 1 should say nothing about this unhappy husband of yours. Wealth of Farmers.

When one takes a dive into agricultural statistics by way of ascertaining the actual result, he is struck by the fact that there must necessarily be a variety of other classes who are even worse off than the farmer themselves. Mr. S. B. Ruggles exhibits a taste for this sort of inqury, and at the Social Science Congress he gave the results of his investigation in some astonishing figures. He stated that the people of ten States lying North of Qhio river, owned in 1860, farm property valued at $914,000,000. The population of these States had doubled in the last ten years. In 1870 the value of this farm property was $5,132,000,000. The value of the farm products was not given in 1850 and 1860, but in 1870 it was shown in these States to be $978,000,000. The farmer was not a serf. He had no tyrannical landlord to oppress him. was shown that 975 of every 1,000 farmers in this section owned farms. In twenty years they had accumulated $5,000,000,000 worth of property. The census of 1870 showed that there were 2,000,000 farmers. This would give an average amount of $2,500 each. It is also shown that they had paid their help less that ten per cent, of their income. They had paid $91,000,000 for help. It was likewise shown that each and all of these poverty-stricken farmprogress, what would be the result in 1900? In 1850 there were raised 300,000,000 bushels of grain in the States; in 1860, 500,000,000 bushels; in 1870, 810,000,000 bushels, or 21,000,000 tons of grain. The figures are stupendous.

Egyptian Hospitality to Strangers.

The Khedive of Egypt encourages visits to ers it now and will continue to be productive of the most important results in the advancement of Egypt. A tourist writing to the Philadelphia Press, tells of a grand ball recently given by the Khedive at the Gnezreh Palace, situated on the Nile. The garden of the palace, with its sparkling fountains, graceful statues and revolving lights, formed a scene of magical beauty. The ball room was superbly decorated with mirrors, and the lady guests were magnificently dressed; glittering coronets, necklaces of precious stones, and on their arms in their hair, and even around their waists were some of the largest diamonds that were ever seen outside of palaces, where the court jewels were displayed. At supper the guests were all seated at tables glittering with crystal, silver and gold, and laden with all the luxaries of the East. Only European and American la-dies were present, the bidies of Egypt not making their appearance outside of the hurems. The gentlemen were of all nations, the most conspicuous among them being Orientals, with their long loose robes, rich scarfs and turbaned heads. The Khedive and some of the natives wore frock-coats and the usual fez.

A Gracefui Action.

The Tennessee Legislature has passed the fol lowing resolution in regard to the Centennial celebration in Mecklenburg county, North Car-olina. Whereas, on the 20th day of May, 1875 the people of Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, in convention assembled, declared their independence of Great Britan, and proclaimed to the world their intention of defending said independence with their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor; and whereas, the State Chief Justice not only dismissed a complaint of of North Carolina proposes to celebrate the centennial of this declaration on the 20th of May proximo; and whereas, the people of Tennessee were then citizens of the Stateof North Carolina and claim a participation in this heritage of fame; therefore, be it

A Noble Judge.

HOW HE CORRECTED THE MISTAKES OF AN IGNORANT JURY.

An occurrence-perhaps without a parallelwas witnessed recently at the close of the Assize, at Chester, England, of which the Manchester Guardian gives the following account: "Mary Lancaster, aged thirty-three, was indicted for the manslaughter of her husband, John Lancaster, at Barkenhead.

"He had long led the prisoner a miserable life. On the 13th of September he came home drunk, and kicked over the meat which she had prepared for his dinner. He then thrashed her, and, in a passion, the prisoner threw at him a sharpened steel, which caused his death. The prisoner was a Lard-working woman, and, in spite of her husband's brutal treatment of her. had done her best to make his home comforta the very last day you were together, you were doing all you could to make him happy. "With a brutality which made me shudder when I read it, he cast away that which you had prepared for him. He has been beating and ill-treating you for months—probably for years—and it is nothing but the tenderness and forgiveness of the woman and wife which prevented you from having him punished for crimes he committed against you time after time. It is only when he has driven you to desperation by ill-treating you the whole day—and I dare say was on the point of ill-treating you again—that you, in a moment of passion, took up a formidable weapon and threw it at him-I believe without the intention of striking him. It did strike him, however, and you immediately ran for assistance, and did all you could to save

" 'All the real right in the case was on your side—all the real wrong on your husband's; and God forbid that I should punish you! I will be no party to it. I will not even make this udgment complete. I will not allow it to be said by anybody that you are a convicted felon -for a conviction is not complete until sentence is passed—and I mean to pass no sentence at all. [Loud cheering, which, for some time, the officials of the court vainly endeavored to suppress.] I shall morely ask you to enter into your recognizance to come up for judgment if called upon-nobody in the world will ever call upon you-God forbid they ever should! [Renewed cheering during which the prisoner left the dock.]"

Our Coinage and the World's Cash.

The total coinage at the United States Mints during the year ending June 30th, 1874, was 36,128,579 pieces. valued at $56,838,216.30. There was an increase of $8,924,165.53 in th amount of gold operated upon, $2,804,761.88 in silver operated upon $15,193,352.50 in gold coinage, $3,037,805.80 in silver coinage, and $10,816,086.57 in bars prepared. The fotal earnings for the fiscal year reached $685,760.-22; the expenditures $1.244,051.98. The new silver trade dollar is still in active demand for China and Japan, and is rapidly displacing the Mexican dollar in those countries. The Director of the Mint at Philadelphia, in his annual report, says that of gold and silver the total timated stock in the country at the end of June last was found to be $163,816,228. The world's stock of precious metal is from ten to twelve thousand millions of dollars, nearly equally divided as to the two metals. Of this amount the Director of the Mint at Paris asserts that France possesses in gold money one thousand millions of dollars, and in full valued silver pieces three hundred millions of dollars. The present annual production of gold throughout the world is estimated at one hundred millions, and of silver at eighty millions of dollars, giving in addition to the accumulated stock of one and one half per cent, per annum. The rate of production is unquestionably diminishing, and as three countries of Europe—Russia, Austria and Italy--have, like ourselves, not even begun to collect gold for the resumption of payments in coin, there is very little chance of prices suffering in this century any inflation from a redundancy of the precious metals.

An Extraordinary "Birth-Mark."

About three months ago in the edge of Russel county a child was born into a family in which other children had previously made their appearance from time to time, all (except the last) being well-formed and healthy. This last is an unusual product of nature. The body from the head down to about the hips is in form and color, with few exceptions, very much like other white children; around the hips it is his capitol by extending all manner of hospi- perfectly black, its legs being like those of an talities to foreigners. The Khedive is one of ordinary child. The head also is spotted, and the most enlightened rulers of the time, and his the hair upon it is as stiff as the bristles of a far-sighted policy of encouragement for foreign- hog. The sex of the child cannot as yet be determined. The mother gives the following explanation of the freak: A short time before the birth of the child, a vicious wild hog broke out of his pen, which was near the house, and with devouring intent immediately made at a child that was playing in the yard. The mother witnessed this scene, and so imminent was the danger that she was greatly terrified. She sprang to the little one's assistance just in time to save it from the furious animal. The hog was of that kind known among farmers as list ed, that is, having a "stripe" across his shoulders; the remainder of his body was spotted. The marks on the child correspond to the marks on the hog. The hair on the child's head is simply a number of stiff bristles, projecting out from the skin. Up to this time it has been healthy, and bids fair to grow up to youth-hood. - Columnia (Ky.) Speciator.

If the headache be immediately above the eyebrows, the acid is best; but if it be a little higher, just where the hair begins, the alkalies appear to be the more serviceable. At the same time the headache is removed, the feelings of sleepiness and weariness. which frequently lead the patients to complain that they rise up more tired than they lie down. generally disappear. CIVII. RIGHTS .- During the past week we have noticed nothing new in the operation of affirmed. W. A. Smith vs. Richmond & Danthe Civil Rights law. In Baltimore, Richmond, ville Railroad Co., from Cabarrus-affirmed. quiet, and private boarding houses have taken their places. It is to be regretted that the leaders of the Radical party cannot be satisfied and keep alive had feeling between the white and colored people, in order to mass the negro purposes. The Radical element lives by excitement, and therefore is always on the lookout for the manufacture of Southern outrages of some kind or other for the Northern market.

Fortunately, the good sense and prudence of the Southern people, under difficulties, have recently, at every turn, baffled the nefarious designs of these radical agitators, and we doubt not, public opinion, all over the country, will set in the right direction at no distant day.

THE STATE CONVENTION .- The Convention question has at length been settled, as a convention of the people has been called by the Legislature to assemble in Raleigh on the 6th of September next, the election for 20 delegates to the Convention to take place on the first Thursday in August, each county to be entitled to the number of delegates that it has members for the House of Representatives. The full text of the bill will be found in another

We by no means wish to dictate, but we could cheerfully vote trict of Columbia. for such a man as Gen. John F. Poindexter, in State could be safely trusted.

The Wilmington Star, which opposed Convention, now properly says:

"The framing of Constitutional law is not a partisan work, but it behooves the Democratic Conservative people to prevent a wary and energetic Radical party from controlling the action of the body, thus turning what would redound to the great good of the State to its everlasting detriment and shame. Let the Conservative party see to it that a majority of delegates holding Conservative views is returned, and all will be well. Otherwise the election in August will prove a rallying point for the now discomfited Republican hosts, and throw a damper on our Democratic friends at the North in the great Presidential election next year."

A BILL IMPORTANT TO SOLICITORS .- A bill has just become a law in this Legislature making it the duty of the Solicitors of the several circuits to attend the federal courts and prosecute revenue officers and other officers of the United States who have been indicted in the State courts and have removed their causes into the Federal Court, under the act of Congress. The bill allows the solicitor a fee of $20 for prosecuting each cause, and allows him to procure some attorney to prosecute U. S. The band, on approaching the portico of the mansion, played, "Hail to the Chief." Then the committee of the laborers went to the door, and through the attendant there informed the President of the presence of the crowd. The attendant soon returned with the message: "The President desires to be excused." The spokesman of the party, who has been acting

There are as many roads to fame and fortune as There are as many foads to fame and fortune as there were gateways to ancient Thebes.
Your ambitious warrier is for carving his way with the sabre; your aspiring politician for manceuving his way by subtlety and consummate act; but there is one broad, grand path to the goal, along which nothing base can travel. It is the path set apart for the march of talent, energy and a noble purpose, and though full of obstacles, it contains none which a great man cannot surpount. This purpose, and though full of obstacles, it contains none which a great man cannot surmount. This fact has been exemplified in imnumerable instances, but in few more forcibly than in the carreer of the inventor of the Wilson New Under-feed Shuttle Sewing Machine. He may be said to be climbing "The steep where fame's proud temple shines afar, Scattering blessings at every step."

These Machines are kept in working order free of charge. Examine the Wilson before purchasing any other. A sample to be seen at the store of Capt. J. E. Gilmer, in Winston, and also at Mr. J. Blickenderfer's first class Notion Store, in Salem.

Night. Thoughts.

BY W. W. H. PEARSON.

Hushed are the sounds of active life For 'tis the evening hour,
The sweet, low voices of the night
Exert a soothing power.
A holy quiet reigns o'er all,
In this sweet hour of peace,
And spirit voices whippering. And spirit voices whispering,

Bid stormy passions cease.

How great the change from busy day, When was the toil and strife, The holy quiet of this hour Reminds us of the life That is pomised us when day and night

And time shall be no more,

A life of endless rest and peace. When earthly toils are o'er. Oh! blessed night, it brings sweet rest To many a weary one, But sweeter far our rest shall be When all over work is done.

In Eden bowers earth's wanderers Shall rest their weary feet, No more to wander alone Nor faint in the noonday heat. Here hours of rest for us are few,

And joys soon pass away, And brightest, fairest things we love Last but a fleeting day.
But when life's dreary changing scenes
Shall be forever o'er,
We'll bid farewell to hours of toil, And rest forevermore.

Death of One of the Lincoln Assasins.

[Port Tobacco (Md.) Independent.]

Edward Spangler died at the residence of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, near Bryantown, in Charles county, Maryland, on Sunday night last. Spangler was arrested with Herold, Atzerott, Payne, O'Laughlin, Arnold, Dr. Mudd, and Mrs. Surratt, and tried by military commission for which resulted the assassination conspiracy, which resulted in the nurder of President Lincoln in April. 1865. Booth, the leader of the conspiracy, was killed in an attempt to capture him; Herold, Atzerott, Payne, and Mrs. Surratt were hanged Atzerott, Payne, and Mrs. Surratt were hanged in the yard of the old penitentiary building on the 7th of July, 1865; Dr. and, Arneld and O'Laughlin' were sentenced to the Dry Tortugas for life, and Spangle to Six years' imprisonment and labor at the said place. O'Laughlin died at the Dry Tortugas during a yellow lever epidemic, and about the close of President Johnson's administration Mudd, Spangler and Arnold were pardoned, the petition for the clemency of the President being signed by the clemency of the President being signed by the officers and men stationed at the Dry Tortugas. a number of whom were attended by Dr. Mudd and nursed by the other prisoners mentioned through the fever. Dr. Mudd, on returning to Maryland, took up his residence on his farm where he has continued to reside. Sam Arnold returned to Baltimore, as did Spangler. The latter, about two years ago, went to live with Dr. Mudd, between whom and Spangler great friendship existed. Spangler was a native of Pennsylvania, but learned his trade of carpenter in Baltimore, where he worked for many years under Mr. James Gilford, a master builder. Mr. Gilford, on taking the position of stage carpenter, at Ford's Theatre, employed Spangler as an assistant. Spangler was rather a stout built man, and was about fifty-five years old when he died. It was alleged that he took charge of the horse of Booth on the night of the assassination, but turned over the animai to "Peanut John" to hold, and also that he had arranged with Booth to have a way kept open in the theatre for him

A Hard Bill to Fill.

The junior editor of the Gallatin -ed for his modesty. When schoolboys, he and the writer were inseparable companions, probably because they both stood in such holy awe of "the gals." A pair of mischievous black eyes would stampede us quicker than a "big dog." One day "Bob" was sent to neighbor Shaw's to inquire about some straw for filling beds, and of course the writer went with him Mr. Shaw was the father of six hateful girls who would rather laugh at a fellow than not, and when we arrived they were all seated at dinner. I dodged behind the corner, while Bob edged carefully in the door, and with a scared look, stammered:

"Mr. Straw, can you let me have enough Shaw to fill my bed?" "Well, R—," said the old gentleman, glancing around the circle of astonished faces, "I suppose so. There are six besides the old woman. But I'd rather you'd leave her, if the girls will be enough. Take them all and God Perfect shricks of laughter went up from those mean things, and R—— took to his heels followed by the writer, and cries from the old man to come back, and he'd "throw in the old

MORTGAGE.-Sambo wanted to buy some land, but he only had half enough money. "Well," said the land agent, "the price is $900, but I'll take $460 and a mortgage for the balance in a year."

Sambo scratched his wool, and said: "But, I say, boss, 'spose a feller haint got no morgitch?" In vain the agent explained, when up steps

"I can ludicate dat pint. A morgitch is like dis yer: 'Spose you pays de boss $450 down, and gives de word an' honor ob an honest nigger to pay him de udder $450 in a year; den spose on de very last day ob de year yer pays $449 an' don't pay him de udder dollar, why den de morgitch say de boss can take all de money an' de land, an' you don't have nuffinnot a cent."

"Golly, boss, a morgitch makes a nigger mighty honest.'

During a trial the Judge called a witness. No one answered, and an elderly man rose and solemnly said, "he is gone." "Where has he gone?" asked the Judge in no tender tone. "I don't know, but he is dead," was the guarded window, with considerable difficulty, he found on the table a note from his wife: "I have gone out; you will find the door-key on one side of

"I suppose," said a quack while fooling with a patient's pulse, "that you consider me a humbug." "How odd it is," responded the patient, "that you can so accurately tell a man's thoughts by feeling of his pulse."

"John," said a father to his son, "I'm busy now, but as soon as I get time I shall give you a flogging." "Don': hurry, pa; I can wait," said the patient boy.

TO THE FARMERS OF THIS AND ADJOINING COUNTIES. We wish to inform you that by the last of February we will have in our Warehouses a large stock of Peruvian ter of the manufacturer and agents who make and sell it and more particularly by the results of it when applied on a crop. We offer this year the same brands as he retofore and guarantee the standard to be as high or higher than ever. These are old and reliable brands that have stood the test for years and increased in popularity each season and it is with pleasure that we refer you to all who have used them on tobacco and other crops. We buy in large

This is our first season here with W. &. C. Phosphate.

A large stock now on hand of the best CLOVER SEED, TIMOTHY SEED, and ORCH. Why do all plow makers try to imitate the "WATT PLOW?" Because it is the arsy made. We are sole Agents for Forsyth county and always keep a large stock at Manufacturer's prices. We are agents for "Merchant's and Mechanic's Fire Insurance Company," of Virginia, and Greensboro Cooking Stoves. We invite all to come and examine our stock and prices.

Iron, Nails, Salt, Fertilizers, Guano, Wart's Plows, Stoves AND ALL MANNER OF MERCHANDISE

We have the largest stock of General Merchandise in either town, Guano and Standard Fertilizers. Our extensive acquaintance with manufacturers and mini-pulators and familiarity with nearly all brands of fertilizers, together with several years prac-tical experience in the sale and use of them, and by strict attention and close observation, we are embled to solve such brands as will be remunerative to the farmer. There are but few who know a fertilizer by its analysis. You have to judge of its real value by the conservaquantities for cash at lowest prices and secure lowest rates of freight and sell for a very small per cent, not half what we can get by selling some brands offered in market. Our stock will be—
